Specially processed parboiled rice Low G.I. (Glycaemic Index)

Our product is based on scientific knowledge, creating the perfect grain. We use special cultivars and process to create low G.I. level rice. This makes the rice suitable for consumers when used in moderate quantity meal of 150 grams of cooked rice.

What is GI?

G.I. stands for GLYCEMIC INDEX. This is a method of numbering or ranking carbohydrate foods to indicate if that food will make glucose level in our body rise very quickly, moderately or very slowly.

The sugar in low G.I. foods are released slowly into the body, causing blood glucose level to rise and then fall more slowly than the foods which have a higher G.I. number. If we choose to eat more food with a low G.I., they will be absorbed more slowly and can help even out glucose levels.

When you eat Low G.i. Foods:

Many studies have shown that food with Low G.I. number satisfies our hunger for a longer period of time and they also reduce our food cravings. And that's not all; research has shown that there are other good reasons for eating low G.I. foods.

HIGH G.I.		MODERATE G.I.		LOW G.I.
